

18: German Government--2997

(1903-04) 1905

Woleaians

116, 164, 744

Woleai

The governmental physician was stationed for two and a half months on the Oleai atoll. He found that the state of health on the whole is better there than on Jap. The natives there suffer chiefly from dysentery, as well as gastric and intestinal diseases in general; there are skin diseases, chiefly ringworm, fewer ulcers, and there is filariasis (elephantiasis).

18: German Government--2997
116, 435

(1903-04) 1905

Woleaians
Woleai

On the suggestion of the district office, the traders of Jap, the Palau Islands, and Oleai entered into an agreement regulating prices of goods and wages of native employees. This has given a secure basis to all business enterprises.

18: German Government--2997

116, 499

(1903-04) 1905

Woleaians

Woleai

The natives on the Oleai atoll have built roads without compensation. . . .

18: German Government--3313
116, 164

(1903-04) 1905

Woleaians
Woleai

From November 18th until January 20th I was on the Oleai atoll; I found the state of health there much better than that on Jap. There fewer ulcerous skin diseases occur. The most frequent diseases are ringworm, which affects a large percentage of the natives, dysentery, and various types of intestinal ailments which I believe are due to excessive indulgence in sour toddy and fermented breadfruit pudding; there are also the various diseases caused by the filaria worm.